

Presbyterian Synod of New York State May Meet Here Next Year

First Presbyterian Church extends invitation for next session in Kingston—Would bring about 600 people here for General Assembly.

Kingston may be the scene of next year's meeting of the Synod of New York Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A. Final action will depend upon the recommendation of the Moderator's Council. If the Synod meets here, it will be as guests of the First Presbyterian Church on Elmendorf street.

At the meeting just closed; in Helen Ellis, W. Kenneth Kukuk, editor in the Elmendorf Street Church, was a delegate from the Presbytery of North River. Others included the Rev. Charles K. Imbrie, First Church, Newburgh, and the Rev. Everett J. McCompte, Marlborough. Mrs. Goodrich Gates of the local church was present as a delegate to the women's synodical Society from the Presbyterian Society of North River. Dr. Gates went to participate in the conferences on Evangelism and Social Service.

The Synod met in the First Presbyterian Church, Glens Falls, from Monday to Thursday. The Synodical Society convened in the Hudson Falls church nearby from Monday to Wednesday. Persons known in Kingston who had active parts in the conferences were the Rev. J. V. Moldenhauer and the Rev. Theodore F. Savage. Dr. Moldenhauer, pastor of the First Church, New York, spoke "The Church and Leisure Time". He came to Kingston a year and a half ago as preacher at the installation of the Rev. James N. Armstrong, as pastor of the Rondout Church. Dr. Savage, learned of discussions on "Program and Field Activities," was pleasant 2 year ago at the installation of Dr. Gates as pastor of the First Presbyterian Church here. Delegates from Long Island was Mr. Armstrong's father, who has reached several times in the Mount Church.

Dr. Moldenhawer was mentioned for the moderatorship of the Synod. As were the Rev. Charles K. Inbrie of the North River Presbytery delegation and the Rev. Peter McKenzie of Stamford. The withdrawal of Mr. Inbrie from candidacy and second round speaking for Dr. McKenzie resulted in the latter's election by a comfortable margin.

Speakers at the Synod's dinner Wednesday night were the Rev. Professor Arthur Hailam Tweedy, Yale Divinity School; Dr. Robert E. Speer, foreign missions secretary of the Presbyterian Church, and the Rev. John McDowell, moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly. Dr. McDowell will be in Kingston next month as speaker at the celebration in the Rondout Church of its one hundredth anniversary.

If the Synod meets in Kingston next fall, it will bring to this city approximately 200 delegates and speakers with perhaps another 100 unofficial members of the New York State Presbyterian churches. An equal number of women will come to attend the meeting of the Synodical held in conjunction with the Synod. In pressing the Synod to meet here next year, members of the North West Synod delegation stressed the central location of Kingston, easy access to the city from all parts of the state, its active Presbyterian churches and first-rate hotel accommodations.

The invitation to the Synod and Medical Society was extended by the Session of the Elmendorf Street church.

A similar strike last spring in western New York was called off when the state passed the emergency milk control law fixing minimum prices.

Women Who 'Prayed Out' Saloons

STATE TO START WAR AGAINST RACKETEERS.

By E. D. FALES, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer.

Albany, N. Y., Oct. 20 (AP).—With a war fund of $100,000 now at his disposal, Attorney General John J. Bennett, Jr., prepared today to hire new lawyers and investigators in the toughest job he has tackled yet for the state—the war on racketeering. The attorney general explained that he is waiting for first reports from Thomas F. Ward, his right-hand man and chief state investigator, on what the new state bureau on rackets has uncovered in the first four weeks of its existence.

"We have found out some very interesting things," Mr. Bennett said. "But we are going slow and sure. I do not make promises or predictions, but one thing can be said—when we get the evidence we will act."

The beer, dock and laundry rackets have occupied the chief attention of the investigators since the legislature last July ordered an immediate war on the "services" and "associations" that prey on business.

Local NRA Official Notices and Rulings

The National Recovery Administration has been advised that the sale of the labor complaints received in connection with the operation of Presidential Re-employment agreements and approved Codes of Fair Competition appear to be solely the result of misunderstanding.

It has been suggested that most of the misunderstandings could be eliminated if all employers were required to post notices in conspicuous places clearly explaining the operation of minimum wage and maximum hour provisions and the authority under which such wages and hours are established.

Many employers throughout the country it is reported to the Administration are following the policy of posting such notices and find them very helpful in promoting a proper understanding of wage and hour provisions among their workers.

The Administrative agencies set up under some codes formally approved by the President urge the posting in conspicuous places in manufacturing plants and business establishments for the information and guidance of employees.

Presidential Re-employment agreements and formal codes are designed to eliminate misunderstandings between employers and employees, as well as to reduce working hours, increase employment and increase purchasing power.

All employers operating in good faith under the NRA are doing so by authority of the President. In view of the excellent results which have followed the posting of explanatory notices in many manufacturing and business establishments, employers in general might well consider the advisability of following this practice, it is suggested.

One of the most enlightening instances of this was given by an industrialist whose company operates six factories throughout the country. Having signed the President's Re-employment agreement, he discovered that there was a great deal of resentment due to misunderstanding throughout his entire business. His men had heard rumors. Their wives had told them. Their neighbors understood. He must counter that at once.

He studied the agreement and the code that was in process of formation for his industry, thoroughly. Then he wrote a few letters, which he addressed individually to every employee in each of his six factories. The letter reduced the provisions of the code to the simplest terms explained, in words that the lowest messenger boy could understand. Just what the National Recovery Act as applied to his business meant to each one of them.

At the same time he called in all his foremen and thoroughly schooled them so that they were in a position to answer almost any question that the men under them could put to them. Then he left strict instructions that anyone not entirely satisfied should be referred to him personally and the result has been that not one complaint has reached him so far.

KINGSTON, N. Y., OCT. 20, 1933.

TIME FOR A CHANGE

Kingston has been under Democratic administration for the past two years and the Democratic party leaders are urging that they be kept in control for another two years. They promise that if they are retained in office to continue the policies that have prevailed under the present administration. What these policies are is known to every man and woman in Kingston.

In the past two years the voters of Kingston have seen the assessed valuations of the city boosted a million dollars one year and reduced a similar amount the next.

They know what they have had to pay out in taxes in the past two years.

They have seen what has been done with the vast sums of money raised by bond issues, or rather they have received a rather sketchy word picture of what has been done, for aside from building wading pools in three of the parks and erecting a brick building to house the Forsyth Park zoo they have seen but little else accomplished.

They have seen the work of rebuilding the Boulevard started by the city and the work left unfinished for the state to complete.

They have seen several streets started and left uncompleted until residents of the streets raised their voices in protest and then sometimes the work of completing the streets was resumed.

In answer to that the Democratic leaders say but you cannot blame the present candidates for what has been done the past two years. They promise to give you a new deal.

But the voters have not forgotten that the men who head the present Democratic ticket in the city this fall have been actively identified with the city administration. Mr. Flannigan as a member of the board of public works and the emergency work relief commission, and Mr. Mann as deputy city clerk.

They have seen what has been done the past two years and they have played a prominent part in the carrying out of the program.

If the voters of the city are satisfied with what has been done the past two years they should retain in office these prominent members of the present administration. But if, on the other hand, the voters believe that it is time for a change they will see to it that Harry H. Walker is elected mayor and Conrad J. Heiselman alderman-at-large. Mr. Walker has announced his program. He believes not only in a new deal but a square deal for every resident of the city irrespective of party affiliation.

The Republican party has nominated candidates this fall for alderman and supervisor in all of the wards who can be depended upon to work in harmony with Mr. Walker and Mr. Heiselman.

The Republican party is not a party of idle promises. Its record while in control of the administration of county affairs for the past twenty years has proven that.

Which party do you want in control of your city? One of idle promises and huge expense, or one that will assure you of a business-like administration of city affairs? That is the question every voter has to answer when he or she casts a ballot on November 7.

RELIEF ROLL INDICATOR

For a long time during the depression the number of applications for charity had no direct ratio to the state of business. Many families with jobless breadwinners lived for a considerable period on savings, insurance or help from relatives. It was only as those resources were exhausted that they turned to relief organizations. As more and more of the unemployed reached that stage, the relief rolls mounted steadily and continued to do so even after the lowest point of the depression had been passed and a slight upturn had begun. Now with considerable recovery achieved, relief rolls in some communities have become almost a local business index.

Many families now are on and off charity a few weeks at a time. Some live in the family role a temporary job which promptly takes that group off the list. But no longer having any backlog of savings or insurance, the family returns immediately to the relief list when the job comes to an end. Thus the state of business in such a community can be read in the report of charity applications. When they fall off in any week, business has been better. When they increase again, there has been a little recession. These weekly fluctuations should not be discouraging, for the increases are always a little smaller than they were a year ago for the same weeks.

FRENCH NRA

Prestige is added to our big recovery plan by the news that France is considering a similar plan. Recent dispatches from Paris indicate that Premier Daladier favors a program including these items:

A $240,000,000 public works plan; A 40-hour week for government contract workers; Minimum wage scales; Maintenance of existing wage scales; Government recognition of the rights of collective bargaining.

It falls short of our vast, complex American program, but obviously the premier is taking several leaves out of the American book. French statesmen, with all their critical attitudes, seem to feel that our efforts are succeeding. There are demands in England and other European countries for policies now being tried here. Imitation abroad would strengthen our own confidence.

Outrageous Fortune

by Patricia Wentworth

SYNOPSIS: Caroline Leish returns from London to find Patsy Ann, with whom she has been living since her husband's death, a changed woman. Caroline is shocked to find that Patsy has become a wealthy woman, and she is determined to find out how she has done it. Caroline is a woman of strong character and is not easily swayed by the temptations of wealth. She is determined to find out the truth about Patsy's fortune and to help her if she can.

ABOUT ROBERT

"GOLLY!" said Caroline to herself. It was a long time since she had heard that word. It was a word that Robert had used so often. It was a word that had been a part of their life.

Caroline dwelt with joy on Robert under the influence of a tender passion, of Robert Pursuing a Course, of Robert Proposing and Being Accepted. She forgot that she was going to sit on a bottom step and let the world go by. Her eyes sparkled. She swooned down upon the hearthrug beside Patsy.

"Patsy Ann—what have you been up to? What has Robert been up to? How could you be so indifferent to have him to lunch in the absence of your chaperon? A gay young man like that! Tell your Aunt Caroline all!"

Patsy began to cry. Her face worked. Tears came rolling down her cheeks. She sniffled loudly between angry sobs.

"You've never done him justice! I've had to put up with your making fun of him always! I didn't say anything—because it wouldn't have been any use saying anything! You only think about your own affairs—you don't confide in me—you never have! I'm sure if you'd been engaged to him, you couldn't have shut me up more—when I asked the simplest and most natural questions—though if I'd chosen—"

She stopped and dabbed her eyes with the blue velvet. She was not quite prepared to claim Jim as a lover. She plunged hastily back into the original grievance. "You always make fun of Robert! If you were older, you'd appreciate him as I do. He has a very high sense of duty and a pure Roman nose. It isn't you he wants to marry, so it doesn't matter what you think of him!"

Caroline was appalled. "Patsy darling—don't. I never, never meant to hurt your feelings. Darling, you know how one laughs at all sorts of things one respects most faithfully—like bishops—and the Bank of England—and—and Parliament."

"Robert isn't an—institution!" That was exactly what he was. But never again must Caroline say so. She hugged the weeping Patsy.

"Darling, I respect him most faithfully. He's as safe as the Bank of England and as good as a bishop. Are you going to marry him? Has he asked you? Have you said yes? Here's my hanky—you're simply ruining that blue velvet."

Patsy blew her nose on the proffered handkerchief. "There's nothing settled," she said in a muffled voice—"nothing at all. Only he said—he did say—his mother thought—he ought to marry. He's such a good son—and he said he would like to please her—and did I think 47 was too old—and when I said no, it was just the prime of life, he said he was very glad I thought so—because he valued my opinion very much. He said that twice—and then he asked me—whether I had any views about—cousins marrying—and I said I didn't think it mattered so long as they weren't very near."

"DARLING! That was practically a proposal!" Patsy gave a final sob.

"I thought—it was—because he got up and looked out of the window—and then he said, 'Your great-grandfather was second cousin once removed to my grandfather.' And then he said he must be going—and then—just at the end—he pressed my hand—and said, 'You will hear from me in confirmation of this interview.'"

Caroline sprang up hastily. If she laughed, Patsy would never forgive her. She went quickly towards the stairs, saying, "I'll just take my things off and come down again."

"You do think he meant something?"

"I don't know. But it was—there the very day Mr. Van Berg was shot, and it's never been there since—and, as Mrs. Smith says, things like that are bound to make people talk."

Caroline turned round and went up the stairs. Her door shut sharply. (Copyright, 1933, J. B. Lippincott Co.)

SUGGESTS DAY OF PRAYER TO SAVE WAR TORN WORLD

October 18, 1933.
The Freeman.
Dear Sirs:

Reading with interest the articles of disarmament conference at Geneva, I am asking The Freeman to publish this. It appears to me there is no more help left for a world peace, not even in all the churches or fraternal orders. Now I will make an appeal to all denominations, races, creeds, and colors, to willingly give one day for a day of prayer in the year to pray to God to save the world from destruction. Let this be soon. I am not a church man nor do I belong to any fraternal order.

But, I believe in an almighty God. Don't wait until your fathers and sons are torn to pieces, or your innocent mothers and children are gassed and city wiped out.

I am making this appeal for humanity and I would like to hear from all the churches in Kingston. Frater-

"It sounds like it." Caroline was gathering up her bag and gloves. "Of course he said he'd come down to see me about Jim."

With her foot on the bottom step, Caroline stood rigid. What had Robert Arbuthnot wanted to find out? She made an effort and said, "About Jim?"

"Yes. Someone has told him about that broadcast, but they'd forgotten the name of the hospital. He wanted to know whether we had any reason to suppose that Jim was on the Alice Arden."

"And you said?"

"I said you thought he might have been. I told him it was the Elton cottage hospital, and that you had been over and found the man wasn't Jim. I told him the name wasn't Randall at all—it was a man called Riddell, and his wife had taken him away."

"He was quite satisfied?"

"He was so thorough. I think it's wonderful to be so thorough and conscientious."

Caroline leaned on the old oak balustrade. The cottage had been there for three hundred years, and for three hundred years the hands of men, and women, and little children had been rubbing the balustrade smooth. Caroline's hands slipped on it now. She came down a step and stood against the newel. What sort of questions had Robert been asking, and what sort of answers had Patsy given him?

"What did he want to know?" she said.

"When you heard from Jim last—and what his plans were—and whether we'd seen him since he landed. . . . Oh, and most particularly, whether we'd heard from him, or about him, since the wreck of the Alice Arden. And of course I said no, we hadn't. And then he said a most awfully curious thing."

"What did he say?"

"It wasn't so much what he said as the way he said it. He coughed and cleared his throat, and poked the fire, and then he asked me whether we'd heard any rumors. What do you suppose he meant?"

"What did you say?"

"Well I hadn't heard anything really so I said I never listened to gossip. And he said, 'Quite right—quite right!' and blew his nose and wouldn't say anything more except vague things like not getting drawn into any scandal, and remembering that we were two women living alone."

"And of course, after saying that about not listening to gossip, I didn't like to ask what he meant—his night's had thought it quite nice of me. You know, he thinks women ought to be protected from contact with the sordid side of life. He said so at lunch. He said their place was the home, and that a really nice woman asked for no higher or wider sphere. He said—"

"Why?"

"That's the sort of woman he admires."

"I don't mean that. Why did he say all that about a scandal?"

"I don't know. It sounded—well, it sounded as if Jim—"

Caroline stamped her foot. "Patsy Ann!"

"Well, it did sound like that—and of course when Mrs. Smith was scrubbing out the kitchen yesterday she did say—you know her sister-in-law's eldest girl is kitchen-maid at Packham Hall—she did tell me—"

"Well," said Caroline.

"You know how she talks—I wouldn't ask her anything, but you can't help listening—well, she says there used to be a photograph of Jim in Mrs. Van Berg's sitting-room—a big one like yours—"

Caroline did not speak; she looked instead—proudly and a little contemptuously.

Patsy's color rose. "It's no use of your looking at me like that! And you didn't let me finish. Mrs. Van Berg might have fifty photographs of Jim if she liked, and if her husband didn't mind. Even Mrs. Smith didn't mind her having the photograph."

"What did she mind?" said Caroline in a deep, angry voice.

"Well, it isn't there now," said Patsy.

"Why should it be?"

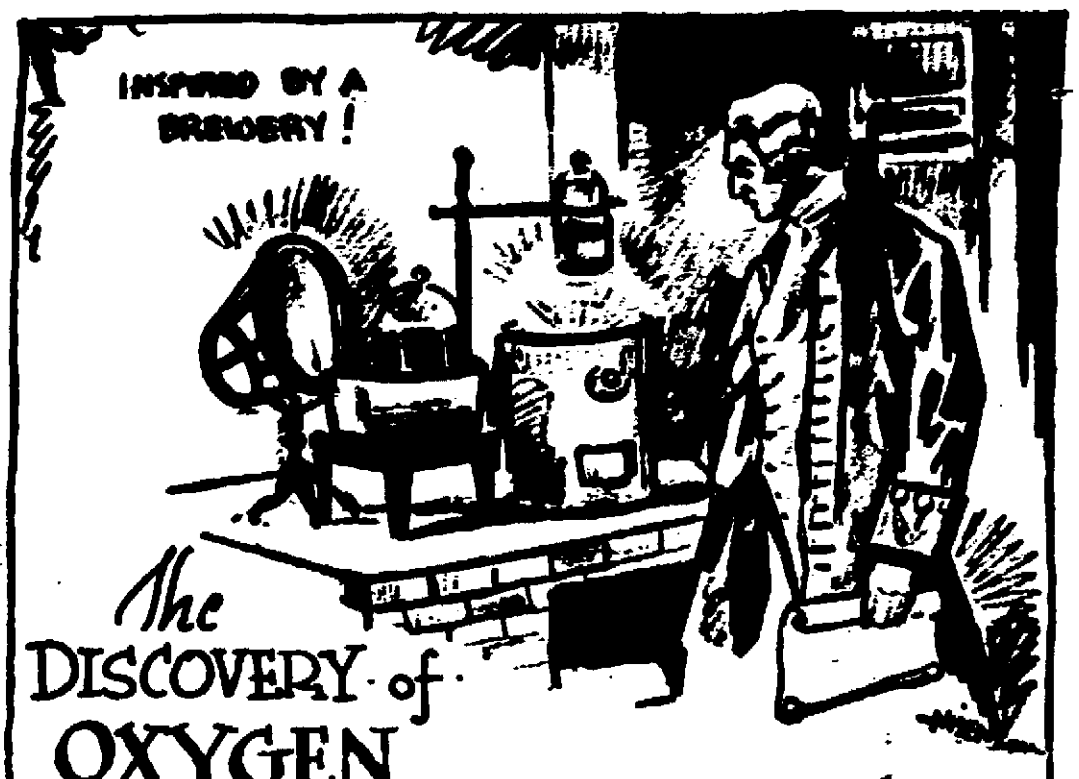

"It isn't. But it was—it was there the very day Mr. Van Berg was shot, and it's never been there since—and, as Mrs. Smith says, things like that are bound to make people talk."

Caroline turned round and went up the stairs. Her door shut sharply. (Copyright, 1933, J. B. Lippincott Co.)

STROKES OF GENIUS

by SAMUEL JOHNSON & ALFRED PARKER

JOSEPH PRIESTLEY's experiments had a profound influence on the development of chemistry, yet he was a preacher by profession and received no scientific education! Watching the production of carbonic acid gas in a next-door brewery, his interest was aroused and thereafter, he experimented with all kinds of queer substances in his efforts to study gases. In August, 1744, by heating red oxide of mercury with a powerful burning glass, he obtained oxygen, which he called de-phlogisticated air.

Priestley knew that oxygen was one of the essential elements in all animal life, yet he failed to realize the importance of his discovery even when it was pointed out to him by the great French chemist, Lavoisier. To the end of his life he stuck to the older outmoded notions of chemistry.

Priestley was a learned English minister, a master of ten languages. His writings on political, religious and scientific subjects fill thirty-five volumes! In 1794, he emigrated to America and settled in Pennsylvania where he spent the last ten years of his life.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

BY James W. Barton, M. D.

(Registered in accordance with the Copyright Act.)
SPINAL ANAESTHESIA

You have undergone an operation and after coming out from under the ether anaesthetic have felt quite uncomfortable—a feeling of nausea and a desire to vomit with considerable pain in the abdomen due to gas pressure.

This feeling may last for a few hours or for a day or two.

A friend of yours undergoes the same operation and has none of this distress because instead of putting him to sleep with ether, he has had an anaesthetic put into his spinal column. He is quite enthusiastic about the whole operation as he is able to tell his friends and family all about it as he knew everything that was said and done during the operation.

Naturally you wonder why you were not given this "spinal" anaesthetic and been spared the distress you experienced from inhaling the ether.

You question your doctor and he informs you that each of the anaesthetic methods have certain advantages and disadvantages.

Thus Dr. U. H. Smith, Louisville, Kentucky, outlines the good points about the spinal anaesthetic: (1) There is no irritation to the bronchial tubes or lining of the lungs; (2) Complete muscular relaxation is obtained requiring less handling of the abdominal organs; (3) There is less nausea and fewer gas pains than with the ether or other methods where the anaesthetic must be breathed into the lungs; (4) There is less loss of fluids (an important point in preventing shock) as fluids may be given during and immediately after the operation; (5) The patient can often help the doctor if questions are asked him; (6) It is probably safer in cases of high blood pressure heart ailments; (7) Patients are grateful, especially if they have disagreeable after effects from the ether method.

Why then should not all operations be done under the spinal anaesthetic?

The dangers of spinal anaesthesia are in: (1) operations above the abdomen, that is from the chest upwards; (2) extremely low blood pressure; (3) brain and spinal disorders; (4) skin infections on the back at the point where the needle containing the anaesthetic is inserted into the spine; (5) nervous or excitable patients who object to being conscious while the operation is in progress.

The point then is that your doctor knowing you as he does and the type of operation to be performed will likely order the best method of anaesthesia for you.

"LET THERE BE LIGHT," SAY TURKISH OFFICIALS.

Istanbul (AP)—Electric bulbs are having a huge sale in Turkey as the Kemalists prepare to celebrate the tenth anniversary of the republic on October 29.

All city and town governments and every household in the land have received instructions that all front windows must be bedecked with lights during the three nights of the celebration.

Dreams of the strong become realities, but dreams of the weak become alibis which bore the public.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

By The Associated Press
KANSAS CITY, Oct. 20—A certain blonde young man has found employment.

Lost: Saturday he robbed two church choir singers of a $55 watch and some cash, saying he "wouldn't save to steal" if he could get work. The said she would pray for him. Yesterday a blonde youth entered the church and left "a package for the pastor." It contained the watch and a note, saying "your prayers are answered."

Menace That Hark: Kansas City—For a half hour, the Red-Treaders Club, an amateur acrobatic group, stood atop an apartment hotel counting what they thought a shower of Orionids. Then one of the "Orionids" landed. Mixed in the count with the celestial shower were wild ducks, and wings made luminous by city lights.

Fred's Through: Lewiston, Mont.—Fred Spicer will have no more deer for his friends. He obligingly went into a thicket to shoot out three deer for a friend, who mistook Spicer for a deer and shot the label from his hunting coat.

Pious Battlers: Norman, Okla.—Like the praying soldiers of Centre College the University of Oklahoma football squadmen enter their games with a benediction ringing in their ears. Casey Cason, a big blonde tackle from Lakeland, Fla., leads the players in prayer before they trot out to face the foe. Bob Dunlap, Oklahoma's triple threat All-Big Six quarterback, teaches a Sunday school class.

Hey! Where's Your Pants? Royal Oak, Mich.—A trouserless youth dashed out of an abandoned house and scurried down Main street. Then came another, and another. Crowds collected. Police discovered Detroit City College sophomores had imprisoned freshmen in the house, departing with their clothes.

They Shall Not Pass: Fairmont, W. Va.—Postmaster Harry Engle gave several persons counterfeit $10 bills and asked them to try to pass them at the post office just as a test. Not one got by.

Disappearing Mustache: Cincinnati—A man with a mustache robbed Frank Smith, Harry Anglin, 24, was taken into custody. During a night in jail he pulled out his mustache, using his fingers for pliers. The robbery victim has set to attempt to identify him.

Can't Fear Irving: Rensselaer—Thomas Irving parked his midsize automobile beside an ornamental pond in a factory yard. When he returned it was gone. "There she is, mister, the brakes came loose," a bystander shouted. The top was just visible above water. "That's fine," said Irving. "I was going to wash her up anyhow."

Last Friday evening a camp fire meeting was held by the Scouts and their fathers in the pine grove near Sully's bridge. Future open meetings of the sort are planned throughout the fall and winter.

Yellowstone Park Has Greatest Animal Show

Yellowstone Park, Wyo.—The "greatest wild animal show in a natural setting" is the claim made by Yellowstone Park officials for the nightly parade of 50 Rocky mountain grizzly bears in Yellowstone canon.

The giant silver tips, bringing wires, cuts and rearings, make a prompt appearance each evening soon after food remnants from the canon hotel and lodge have been placed on a concrete feeding platform.

Visitors, protected by a high steel wire fence and an alert ranger armed with a high powered rifle, may watch the grizzlies from the time they start down from surrounding hills until they leave for their homes once more.

Mothers with one, two or three cubs meander in, keeping close watch over the youngsters. Yearlings hungrily snatch morsels overlooked by the male rulers of the tribe, who in turn eat warily as they watch rivals. The sight is without parallel anywhere else in the world, park officials say.

$15,000,000 Atlantic Phone Cable Is Planned

London.—Plans are ready for the laying of a new Atlantic cable, which would cost $15,000,000, for the establishment of an untappable "on-demand" telephone service between Britain and America.

The scheme is the cable companies' direct challenge to the radio-telephone system.

Everything is ready to tackle the job—one of the biggest in the history of ocean cables—and the only difficulty is that of finance. It is understood that American financiers are prepared to collaborate with British interests once certain difficulties are removed.

Whisky Hill Keeps Its Name

Salem, Ore.—Prohibition may be voted in and out again, but Whisky Hill remains the same forever. A recent attempt to change the name of Whisky Hill school, near here, to something less suggestive was voted down at a special election. The vote was 12 to 10.

Non-Bobbing Barber Quits After 50 Years

Boston.—Concord, capital of New Hampshire, has a barber whose resolution is as hard and enduring as the rock for which the Granite state is named. Retiring at the age of seventy-nine after a half century of work, he proudly boasts that never has he cut a woman's hair. Women have begged, threatened, argued and laughed, but no one could move his immutable determination.

His reply, with numerous variations, has been, "What was good enough for God Almighty ought to be good enough for them. He put the hair on their heads as a crowning glory. No bob or shingles ever will be executed in this shop."

ANTI-WAR STRIKE VOTED BY FRENCH TRADES UNIONISTS

Paris (P).—Paralyzing of France by a general strike of all unions from hairdressers to school teachers, as a last attempt to stop a war, has been sanctioned by the French General Labor Confederation.

The nationalist press sees this as a grave peril for France in the face of present European uncertainty.

In its annual congress, the confederation, which has a million members, mandated its officials to give the government "solemn notifications going as far as a general strike, of the unchanging will of the proletariat not to go to war."

"If," the resolution continued, "in spite of this desperate resistance, an armed conflict breaks out, the General Labor Confederation should immediately continue at home and abroad energetic action to stop hostilities."

The resolution predicted failure for the Geneva disarmament conference unless it obtains a pact at the present session.

SOUTH AFRICAN ACCIDENTS
TOP BRITISH, AMERICAN.

Johannesburg, So. Africa (P).—The death rate from accidents is higher in Johannesburg, Capetown and Pretoria than in the largest cities of Great Britain and the United States, says "the safety first" association here.

In Pretoria the accidental death rate was 30 in 100,000 for 1932; in Johannesburg, 24 and in Capetown, 22.

The highest similar rate in the United States is given as 17 in Washington and 16.4 in San Francisco.

In Great Britain, London tops the list with a rate of 15.4 while Manchester has 14.9 and Birmingham 13.3.

India Turns To British Autos.

Simla, India (P).—Government figures show that in one year India's imports of American automobiles have fallen two-thirds while imports of British cars have doubled. The total, however, fell from 11,522 in 1931-32 to 8,877 in 1932-33.

ROAD ROLLER USED BY MAYAS IS FOUND

Five-Ton Cylinder Employed in Surfacing Work.

Washington.—Recent discovery in the jungle-nursed region of northeastern Yucatan, 40 miles out of Cobá, of a segment of solid stone 13 feet long, 2½ feet in diameter and weighing about 5 tons, already fashioned in cylindrical form, draws attention once again to the fact that the ancient occupants of an area long uninhabited were skilled in the building of raised roads of paved stone.

It seems probable that this great stone cylinder was designed to be used in packing down into solid mass successive courses of material, particularly surfacing material, as these were added in the process of road construction.

Presumably gangs of laborers on the road, possibly slaves working under threat of the lash, possibly captives taken in combat, pushed such cylinders about as the work proceeded and in so doing anticipated by many centuries the advent of the steam or gasoline-driven metal roller, so essential to the roadmaking of today.

Network of Roads.
Cobá, a Maya city of consequence during pre-Columbian days, as shown by abundant archaeological evidence, but now long abandoned, lies about 65 miles east of south of Chichén Itzá, the headquarters of the archaeological field staff of Carnegie Institution of Washington.

Study of Cobá and the region thereabouts has revealed the fact that it is at the center of a network of raised, constructed roads which run off north, east, south and west and connect various groups of ruins located about the chain of small, fresh-water lakes that is such a distinguishing feature of the district.

One great road which takes to the westward from Cobá had been thought to end at the ruins of Yaxuna, about 12 miles southwest of Chichén Itzá, but no one had ever traced its course from end to end.

For many years, Dr. Sylvanus G.
Morley, in charge of the Carnegie institution field staff, has hoped for opportunity to determine the facts about this greatest of all the causeways running out of Cobá. Finally, this year seemed propitious and he set about organizing an expedition.

To head the expedition, he chose Alfonso Villa, a young schoolmaster of the Yucatecan race.

It was while cutting his way through the thick bush, 22 miles out of Yaxuna, that Villa came upon the stone-roller.

Road Walls Built.

In construction of their roads, the ancient engineers began by digging down to hardpan, which is near the surface, and erecting retaining walls on each side to the height to which they desired to bring the road.

These walls were built of large,
roughly faced limestone set in mortar.
Into the space between the walls a layer of heavy boulders, some of them two or three feet in length and weighing many hundreds of pounds, were carefully laid and the spaces between chinked with smaller stones, fitted and hammered into position.

Other courses followed, each of successively smaller boulders and stones, quite as carefully placed, until the road had been brought to requisite height, whereupon a layer of rock broken into much finer pieces was added. After this was hammered or rolled into a hard, level surface, a final coating of mortar cement was applied.

This cement was made of lime mixed with finely sifted white earth, called asacab, which, originally, under the tropical sun, must have given the roads a dazzling appearance, quite as dazzling, perhaps, as the great "white ways" of our own cities.

Pharmacologist Finds Drug That Will Reduce

Palo Alto, Calif.—A drug which will make persons thin without the necessity of exercise has been found by research pharmacologists in the Stanford medical laboratories here.

It operates by producing a high fever in the patient, thereby consuming energy and tissue beyond the normal rate.

A preliminary report on this new drug has been published in the Journal of the American Medical Association by Dr. W. C. Cutting and M. L.
Thayer.

Small doses administered daily have reduced the weight of fat persons two pounds a week over a period of several months without diet changes or unnormal exercise.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS—SOUNDS

By ROBERT COOMBS
HOLLYWOOD.—The film story that causes grief to a studio for months on end is so story to be told. It may emerge as an "epic."
That best-selling book of nearly three years ago, Francis Yeats-Brown's "Lives of a Bengal Lancer," has been a Paramount property for two and a half years, and now finally it will go into production—on a scale calculated to make it most spectacular.

It will not be, of course a film version of the book, for the book has no plot, and a motion picture must have. There will be the colorful background of the British Indian army unit, and incidents from the book, worked into a movie plot.
"Worked" is a word used advisedly here, for some 30 writers have inscribed on the script, and the final version is the one that satisfies Stephen Roberts, director assigned to the film.

'Importing' India
This is the same picture for which Ernest Schoedsack took a camera crew to India to photograph backgrounds and atmosphere. However, wet weather and heat spoiled most of his film, and Arizona desert and mountains will substitute, with

Cutting Room Bits
Creighton Chaney, who didn't fall in the stardom mold at one studio, is carrying on in pictures at another.

The vehicle is "Sixteen Fathom Deep"—about sponge-fishing, of all things—and Sally O'Neill will co-star.

Sally Eilers, who wouldn't co-star with James Dunn in "Jimmy and Sally" because she didn't like the part, is now announced in a "leading female" role opposite George O'Brien.

WOODSTOCK FISH AND GAME CLUB SEEKS NEW MEMBERS.

Woodstock, Oct. 20.—At a recent meeting of the Woodstock Fish and Game Club in Firemen's Hall it was voted by members present to reduce the annual membership fee and to change the time of membership from September 1 to August 31.

The reduction of the membership fee to one dollar was made as a vital effort to induce more sportsmen to join the club and to insure thereby the continuance of state assistance in the stocking of fields and streams.
Without a local organization it will be impossible to receive state aid and it was impressed upon those present that soon the hunting and fishing will prove poor, as in the recent years before the Fish and Game Club became operative. In those years rabbits and grouse were practically extinct, due to over-zealous hunting.

Membership dues may be paid to Bernard Lapo, secretary of the club.

Hunting in Woodstock.

Woodstock, Oct. 20.—The hunting season was begun very strenuously last Sunday in the Woodstock area, and though no actual human casualties were reported, hunters report narrow escapes. Numbers of rabbits and gray squirrels were bagged.
One of the first gray foxes of the year was shot Monday by Nelson Schultz of Wittenberg in the vicinity of Yankeetown Pond.

noon after having a most enjoyable

Miss Vroom has a number of old nity of visiting with her.

FORD OWNERS SHOULD READ THIS

Your car is an investment in convenient transportation. Yet not even a Ford can give you perfect wisdom unless you protect it against freezing and rust.
Built-in anti-freeze evaporates during warm spells and leaves your car unprotected. Rusts are frequent. Tests show many so-called "permanent" anti-freezes break down and cause rust.

At $2.95 a gallon, Eveready
Protectol is your most economical
buy. One filling lasts all winter—thawed or more miles of safe, rust-free service. The V-8 takes 2 gallons for protection to zero. All other Fords need only 1 gallon for protection to zero. For other makes, see your dealer's chart.

Eveready Protectol is approved by all car manufacturers. Fully guaranteed by National Carbon

The average husband would be perfectly willing to give up some space in his wife's heart if she would only give him a little more space in the clothes closet.

Judge—So your name is Mullins?
Witness—Yes.
Judge—And you want it changed to Pullman? Tell me why you want it changed?
Witness—Well, to tell you the truth, Judge, it was my wife's idea. She thinks we ought to have the same name that is on our spoons, forks, knives and towels.

One crop that seems never to suffer from over-production is that of the hopeful investors in get-rich-quick schemes.

The young bride's diet may be causing her weight, but we doubt if friend husband will notice any difference when she puts her foot down.

Many an ex-convict is out under heavy bail—and more than one ex-husband is free under big alimony.

Start a good report on a man and only two out of ten will believe it. But start a bad report on him and the entire ten will believe it and ask no questions.

A typical American is one who makes money at his own trade and loses it monkeying with another.

Speaking of liquidity. Americans are now drinking beer at the rate of more than a billion glasses a month.

Here is an extract from a letter received by a mother from her daughter at college: "I realize, mother dear, that daddy is paying a lot to keep me at school and that I must try and learn something. I am taking up tennis."

High School pupils are demonstrating that they have some faint glimmerings of truth. Here is an interesting list of answers perpetuated by our "offspring" at a recent test: "A grass widow is the wife of a dead vegetarian."

"A glazier is a man who runs down mountains."

"Average means something that hens lay their eggs on."

"Quinine is the bark of a tree, canine is the bark of a dog."

"Marconi is the stuff out of which you make delicious puddings."

"Eau was a mighty hunter who wrote fables and sold them for a bottle of potash."

"The Minister of War is the clergyman who preaches to the soldiers in the barracks."

"Transparent means something you can see through—for instance a key-hole."

"An optimist is a man who looks after your eyes and a pessimist is a man who looks after your feet."

"A synonym is a word used when you don't know how to spell the one you first thought of."

What causes the rich to dodge taxes, the criminal to racketeer, the strong nation to bully the weak? The ability to get away with it.

A man had just learned that the youngest son of his colored cook had been appointed stenographer to a large manufacturer.

The Man—Aunt, tell me how you have brought up your children so that each one of them has become so good and useful a man?

Negro Cook—Oh, honey, that's nothing. I had no education and I could only teach them three things—just three things I taught 'em: Their prayers, their manners, and to work.

News from the World on Wheels

October retail sales of Oldsmobile Sixes and Eights in the first 10-day period of the month are reported by K. M. W. Shaw, Oldsmobile sales manager, as maintaining the steady gains shown by this busy General Motors division. "Business in the first 10 days of October," says Mr. Shaw, "continues to reflect the improvement that we have been enjoying throughout 1933. The volume is 80 per cent over that of the corresponding period a year ago. And our total retail sales for the year, up to and including October 10, are 9,728 cars ahead of the same period last year. While it is naturally too early to talk about the complete October performance, we feel confident that Oldsmobile will continue to secure an impressive share of the business in its price field."

Count Costo lies beaten by Puffy's keen blade. He growls as he sprawls on the grass of the glade. The Puffy is beaming. Says he. "This is fun!" When Puffy cries, "Puffy! The guy's got a gun!"

Deposit Liquidation Board New Weapon To 'Free' $1,700,000,000 In Closed Banks

By CARL C. CRANMER

Washington, D.C. — A new recovery scheme, the Deposit Liquidation Board, is being whetted into line with the battery of other government agencies plugging away in President

THESE MEN COMPOSE LIQUIDATION BOARD

Washington, D.C. — Members of the Deposit Liquidation Board, seeking to free deposits from closed banks are:

C. B. Merriam, head of the board and director of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

James H. Jones, R.F.C. chairman.

Dean G. Acheson, under-secretary of the treasury.

Lewis M. Douglas, director of the budget.

J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency.

Walter J. Cummings, chairman of the Deposit Insurance Corporation.

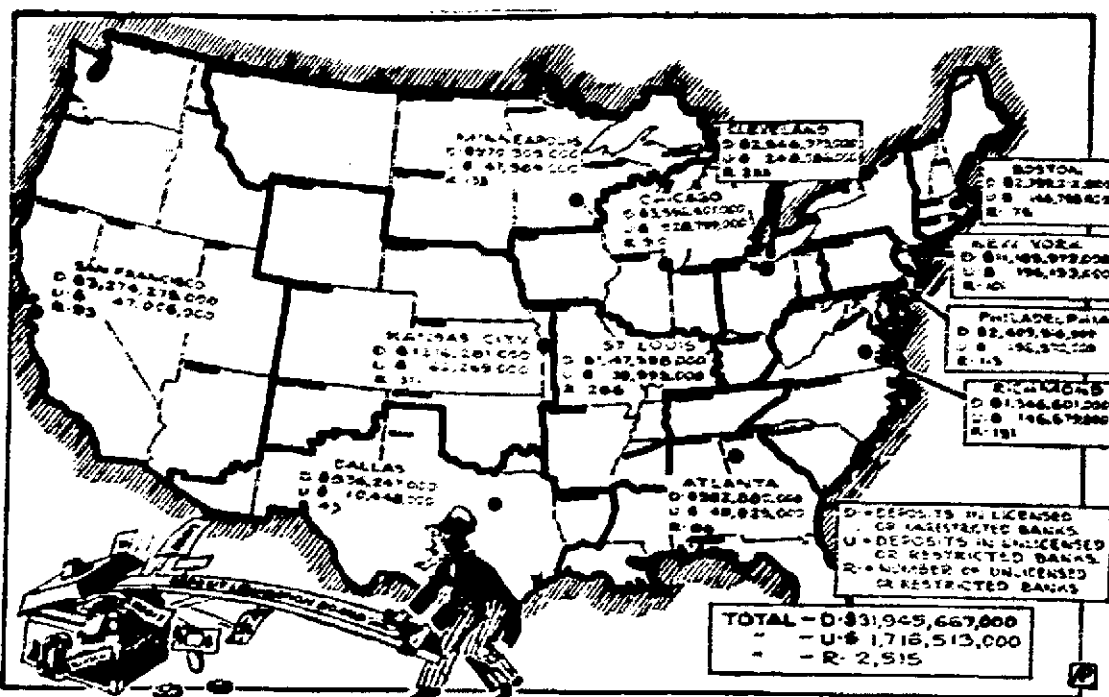

Roosevelt's campaign to expand credit, free bank deposits and strengthen the banking structure.

The immediate problem of the new credit weapon is to lay siege to frozen bank deposits aggregating more than $1,700,000,000 in some 2,500 banks throughout the country.

On the "Firing Line"

In the line of battle, with varied objectives as their targets, are the United States treasury, the federal reserve, Reconstruction Finance Corporation, Home Owners' Loan Corporation, Farm Credit administration and the new Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. In the background, in reserve, is the President's inflationary power.

The newest of the government's "Big Berthas" on the financial front is a division of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation and is headed by C. B. Merriam of Topeka, Kas., a director of the corporation.

Uncle Sam has a new force to use in the task of prying open the 2,500 or more banks either closed or under restrictions in the United States. It is the Deposit Liquidation Board, which plans to free as much as possible of the more than $1,700,000,000 held in such institutions. The map shows, as of September 27, how such funds are distributed among the 12 federal reserve districts.

Through it President Roosevelt has said it is hoped to free $1,000,000,000, or approximately half the frozen funds in closed banks.

On September 27, latest date at which figures for both national and state banks are available, 2,515 banks had not been licensed or were still on a restricted basis since the March bank holiday. These banks had deposits on June 30, or on the latest bank call, of $1,769,969,000.

Of these, 877 were national or federal reserve member banks, with deposits of $888,140,000.

"Thawing" Has Begun

The size of the task of pumping steam into banks still frozen may be judged when it is pointed out that from March to September 27 a total of 14,086 national, federal reserve member and non-member banks opened, with deposits totaling nearly $32,000,000,000.

Already high-gear machinery is at work thawing out national banks. J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency, has announced that reorganization plans for 376 national banks with deposits of $398,000,000 have been approved.

It is in reopening state banks that the new Deposit Liquidation Board is expected to bend its greatest efforts. Through the board, banks may obtain loans up to 50 per cent of their deposits on frozen assets for immediate distribution.

Exchange Given Liquid Assets

Meanwhile the federal reserve is pursuing its policy of replacing government securities of member banks with cash which it is hoped will be felt in expanded credit to industry.

Open national banks and receivers for national banks may gain liquid assets by exchanging Home Owners' Loan Corporation bonds for real estate mortgages, and extension of this privilege to conservators of national banks is being considered. It has been indicated a similar step may be taken with regard to farm credit administration securities.

The R.F.C. is offering to subscribe to capital stock of banks to permit them to come in under provisions of deposit insurance which goes into effect January 1, and the Deposit Insurance Corporation has indicated that banks will be judged on a basis of solvency rather than liquidity as to their fitness to obtain the deposit guarantee.

ABRAHAM ISRAEL TO HAVE SERVICES TONIGHT

Religious services will be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock in the Congregation Abraham Israel, corner Fourth and Pierpont streets. Rabbi Samuel Epstein will preach the sermon, the theme of which will be "The Significance of the NRA". The choir will lead in the chanting of the services. A discussion will follow the sermon. Refreshments will be served. The public and especially the young people are cordially invited to be present.

Indian Village, adjacent to Juneau, Alaska, now boasts a modern sewage system constructed largely by Indian labor.

At The Theatres

Kingston: "The Bowery." That most famous of all American streets, the Bowery, is the setting of this remarkable new picture, a picture that brings together Wallace Beery and Jackie Cooper, one of the real movie teams of the present day. Young Mr. Cooper plays the made to order role of "Swipes", newsboy extraordinary, and his hero is the gangling, sloppy Chuck Connors, big shot of the Bowery. Then there is the smooth and tricky Steve Brodie, playing his cleverness against the blunt forcefulness of Connors. The love and devotion of "Swipes" for the rough and ready Connors is a jewel of character acting, splendidly done by Jackie Cooper. It's a common story of common people on a common street, brilliant in direction and cast, one of the really fine pictures of the year. George Raft, Fay Wray and Pert Kelton are featured in a large cast. The direction is by Raoul Walsh. Superlative entertainment.

Orpheum: "Below the Sea" and "Dance Hall Hostess." Fay Wray, Ralph Bellamy and Director Al Rogell are the main reasons for the success of the first feature, a sea story of daring adventure and danger, with some interesting scenes of deep sea life filmed in technicolor. It concerns a search for buried treasure, with the usual complications and treachery. "Dance Hall Hostess" is the life of a dance hall girl, played by Helen Chandler.

Broadway: "Ex-Lady" and "Terror Abroad." Betty Davis, in her first starring role, plays the part of a modern dame who wants the protection of marriage but none of its restrictions. Freedom and romance are lost by matrimony she believes, and two people in love won't stay that way if they make the mistake of marrying. So she and Gene Raymond decide to declare a marriage holiday and live separately. The girl's modern ideas work fine until another girl falls in love with her husband, then the story is different. Supporting Miss Davis and Mr. Raymond are Claire Dodd, Monroe Owsley and Frank McHugh. "Terror Abroad" is an unbelievably cruel and bloodthirsty murder drama that takes place on the high seas. A wealthy yachtman receives a message that his wife is in danger, so he decides to kill off his guests and escape to some island refuge. This necessitates considerable killing, and only the rapid fire comedy of Charles Ruggles saves the show from being too terrifying and unreal. John Halliday, Shirley Grey, Neil Hamilton, Jack LaRue and Verree Teasdale are in the cast.

Tomorrow: Kingston: "The Private Life of Henry VIII." No finer example of motion picture perfection has ever reached the screen than this incomparable play whose very brilliance of direction fades under the dominance of its even greater star, Charles Laughton. Mr. Laughton in the title role contributes a characterization without a flaw, and before a setting of historical grandeur, King Henry VIII moves about his glittering court, with matters of state of secondary importance, not to in any way obstruct the more important business of finding a satisfactory queen. Ponderous, child-like, brutal, extravagant beyond belief, yet lovable despite a multitude of failings, King Henry's life and loves move across the screen in entertaining fascination. This drama establishes Mr. Laughton as second to none in the motion picture industry, and it also proves that England is capable of turning out as good talkies as the United States, for this show was filmed and made in England, with a complete English cast. Superlative entertainment, enjoyable every moment, with a perfect dialogue, unusual treatment, and a star that makes the most of every situation. Don't miss this one. It's a talkie high light.

Orpheum: "Island of Lost Souls" and "Sinister Hands." The story by H. G. Wells, concerning a demented scientist who tries to make beasts into humans by grafting and other choice devices and who lives on a lonely island expressly for that purpose, turns out to be thrilling and gruesome screen material. A young man reaches the island through fate, and before he is able to get away much occurs in the way of action. Charles Laughton, Richard Arlen, Bela Lugosi, Lella Hyams and "The Panther Woman" are members of the cast. "Sinister Hands" is a melodramatic thriller with Jack Mulhall and Phyllis Barrington.

Broadway: "Wild Girl" and "Gambling Ship." Charles Farrell has a new girl and a new kind of story in this tale of the wide open spaces, and Joan Bennett also is differently cast as an untamed daughter of the west, who shies at convention and all those other things that make civilization what it is today. Directed by Raoul Walsh, with Ralph Bellamy supporting the two featured players, this fast moving drama of law and those who break it, romance and action, proves to be exciting entertainment. "Gambling Ship" is a gangster story with Gary Grant, Benita Hume, Jack LaRue and Glenda Farrell. "Tarzan the Fearless," the serial picture starring Buster Crabbe, is also a featured part of the program.

"Gambrius" was a mythical Flemish king who is credited with being the first brewer. His name is usually derived from that of Jan Prins, John L., the victorious Duke of Brabant, who was president of the Brussels Guild of Brewers, and his portrait, with a foaming glass of ale in his hand, had the place of honor in the guild hall.

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

TELLS SAFE, SIMPLE WAY TO TREAT

If you have catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh, or if phlegm drops in your throat and has caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels, you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be entirely overcome in many instances by the following treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Secure from McRide Drug Stores or your druggist 1 ounce of Parmit (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it 1/2 pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar, stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easier, while the distressing head noises, head aches, dullness, cloudy thinking, etc., should gradually disappear under the tonic action of the treatment. Loss of smell, taste, defective hearing and mucus dropping in the back of the throat are other symptoms which suggest the presence of catarrh and which may often be overcome by this efficacious treatment. It is said that nearly ninety per cent of all ear troubles are caused by catarrh and these must, therefore, be cured if people whose hearing may be restored by this simple, harmless, home treatment. Turkey Turns To Farm And Factory As First Decade Under Kemal Ends

By FRISCHILLA KING

Ankara (AP).—To carry to Turkey's millions of peasants the decade of reforms adopted for 2,500,000 urban dwellers, and to map a "five-year plan" for the nation's industrial development, are the two huge tasks now before Mustafa Kemal's government.

As the Kemalist regime approaches its tenth anniversary on October 29, urban Turkey, already modernized, is beginning to think of its country cousins.

Schools Still Scarce

When the reforms started, Turkey had a population of 13,500,000; now she has 17,600,000.

Though the government has opened 2,650 new schools in ten years, 57,000 of Turkey's 40,000 villages are still without a single school or post-office, states the semi-official newspaper "Yakit."

With the new Latin alphabet and the obligatory ABC schools, illiteracy has decreased from 50 to 75 per cent, but the latter is still a big ratio for the government to tackle.

By suppression of the tithe, and shortening military service, the republic softened two of the heaviest burdens which the sultans had laid on the peasantry. Warfare against bandits by the Kemalist pendarmie has brought a measure of security to Anatolians unknown for centuries.

Women Toil; Witches Spin

But the government has not yet been able to give them the promised new day of enlightenment and prosperity.

Several million peasant women still labor in the fields with no inkling of the freedom enjoyed by women in towns and cities.

Despite the federal law against sorcery, witch doctors still scatter disease and death in regions where government health inspectors have not penetrated.

The government is sending 17 school teachers to the United States

Reflecting Gazi's Ten-Year Reform Effort

The new Turkey wangles jazz from some of the traditional wailing musical instruments of Asia Minor and the band of this Istanbul cabaret, sitting beneath a portrait of Gazi Mustafa Kemal Pasha, says it paces merrily. The violin, piano and women singers are modern; the band drum, elaborated Turkish flute and mandolin-like "out" are of the old regime.

this fall, to bring back eastern models of America's "little red school houses."

The building of agricultural institutes is another step towards peasant advancement.

Rural Teachers Drafted

Still another is the completion of 1,500 miles of new railroads, destined to carry civilization to hidden primitive corners of Anatolia.

The government is recruiting hundreds of young graduates of the state medical school at Istanbul to take jobs as government doctors for three or four years in doctorless districts of Anatolia.

To the distant provinces, also, it is sending graduates of the government's new language school at Istanbul. Those who have received certificates as teachers of English, French, or German and refuse appointments to Anatolian towns, are fined $300 and barred from teaching elsewhere.

Americans Map Industry

Modernization of the peasantry will go faster when Turkey completes her second great task, elaboration of an economic plan, to be realized within definite time limits, like Russia's five-year plans.

How to industrialize the country and how to make agriculture more prosperous, are problems entrusted to American specialists.

Walker D. Hines, war-time director of U. S. railroads, is chief of the mission. He is assisted by Major Somervell of the U. S. Army; O. F. Gardner, agricultural expert; Matthew Van Sien, formerly of the U. S. Bureau of Mines, and Sidney Paige, Washington oil expert.

ADVOCATE SLASHES IN EXECUTIVES' PAY

Washington, Oct. 24 (AP).—Further legislation to slash salaries of big business executives was advocated by a group of senators today as the Federal Trade Commission awaited responses to its request for salary data from 2,000 corporations.

Motivated largely by disclosures in the Senate Wall Street inquiry that as high as half a million dollars have gone to one financier in salaries and bonuses for one year—and that period during the depression—these senators now in Washington are almost a unit for doing something to keep salaries down.

Some feel Congress can go all the way and regulate the pay of heads of all business—public and private. Most, however, agree the restrictions could be applied only indirectly and then only to those corporations doing business with the government.

HATE FOR TOT GONE, PARENTS CRAVE IT

Future May Be Decided by State Referendum.

Denver.—A state-wide referendum may decide the future of Baby Erkenbeck.

A movement has been started to have as many as possible of Colorado's citizens express unofficially through a newspaper poll what should be done with the "hate child" of Maynard and Margaret Erkenbeck, now an inmate of a home for dependent children.

On July 20, the father and mother of the tiny baby appeared in Denver's famous Juvenile court with an amazing request. They swore that they never wanted the child, hated the sight of him, and wanted the state to take care of him.

They Want Freedom.

"We didn't want him; we don't want him now," the father, a regularly employed laborer, declared. "We want to be free to go here and there."

"Imagine, Judge, how you'd feel living always in the presence of something you detested!"

Judge George H. Lerg of Golden, sitting on the juvenile bench in the absence of Judge Stanley Johnson, committed the child to the state home, with a stinging condemnation of the parents.

The father's work took him to Oregon. The mother remained in Denver. Although free to go "here and there," she chose to remain near her baby. Daily she visits the state home, watches her baby being fed and holds him in her arms.

"To the same hour that my baby was taken from me, I knew we had done wrong and that I could not live without him," Mrs. Erkenbeck declared, as she pleaded with state officials to restore her child to her.

"We were impulsive and selfish. My husband isn't cruel. We loved each other. We had been together all the time since our marriage. When the baby was coming we didn't want him and when he came and interfered with what we wanted to do we resented his presence—or thought we did."

Both Want Him Back.

"As a child I was brought up with twelve brothers and sisters. My father was a shoe cobbler, but mother and he were good to us and did everything they could for us. At twelve I went out to make my own living nursing babies. Children, children, children. That's all I knew. I wanted to be free. Maynard and I were happy as could be. Then our baby came. We had to change our ways. So we did this awful thing."

The father, too, has made up his mind that he must have the baby back. "How is the baby getting along?" he asks in his letters from Oregon. "I hope you can get him soon, so we can all be together again."

The Continents

Europe, Asia and Africa are usually classified as separate continents, even though Europe and Asia comprise one great land mass, Eurasia. To these must be added North America, South America and Australia. Some authorities add a seventh continent, Antarctica, the land mass around the South pole. A continent is defined as one of the great divisions of land on the globe, differing from an island or peninsula not only in its size but in its structure, which is that of a large basin bordered by mountain chains.

College Bars Tobacco, Frowns on All Courting

Walla Walla, Wash.—With the opening of Walla Walla college for 1933-34, students about to enter foreign missionary fields for the Adventist church come under the same discipline as those in the high school and grade departments. The Union Educational board adopted the following rules governing the church schools:

Pupils above the fourth grade shall not wear rolled stockings.

Sleeves shall cover the upper arm and reach at least to the elbow.

The boyish bob should be discouraged by church officers, teachers and parents.

The free use of cosmetics destroys the simple beauty of girlhood, and the use of lipsticks and rouge will not be permitted upon the school grounds.

Jewelry shall not be displayed.

Use of tobacco by students cannot be tolerated.

The privileges of the church school shall not be granted to those who attend film theaters, dances or other such places of amusement.

Proper friendship and good fellowship are conducive to normal school development, but sentimentalism and courting among church school pupils thwart the purpose of Christian education.

Modest Tombstone Marks Grave of Great Engineer

Oakland, Calif.—A modest tombstone marks the Washington grave of Arthur Powell Davis, but his work as "America's greatest engineer" will serve to perpetuate his memory indefinitely.

Davis died recently at his home here after 18 months of illness. He left his mark on the physical face of the world as few other men have. He supervised building of 90 dams, severed two continents, united two oceans, built 35,000 miles of canals, put water on 2,000,000 desert acres, advised Russia how to reclaim another 10,000,000 acres of arid land and worked in every part of the globe.

Turtle Dated in 1767 Is Found in Massachusetts

Stoughton, Mass.—"The Methuselah of turtles," a box turtle apparently at least one hundred and sixty-six years old, was seen by Mrs. William B. Holmes at Dry pond here recently.

Time-worn carvings on the turtle's shell showed four dates, 1767, 1821, 1828, and 1840. Since the latter year the old fellow apparently had been in hiding.

Mrs. Holmes said she was convinced the markings were genuine.

"Hell-Bent for Election"

According to a study made by a representative of Columbia university, the phrase "Hell-bent for election" originated in Maine in 1840. Before that time Maine was a Democratic state. The panic of 1837 turned Maine over to the Whigs and to the surprise of every one, Kent, the Whig candidate for governor, was elected in the September election. One of the campaign slogans was "Maine went Hell-bent for Governor Kent."

A. work and is a member of the American Legion as well as past officer of various Masonic bodies. He is noted as an after-dinner speaker and has a host of friends throughout the Hudson River Valley, who will be glad to hear of his receiving a call to Kingston. The Wurts Street Baptist Church is one of the best known Baptist churches in the Baptist Association and has had a long and honorable record of Christian work and has had some very prominent men as pastors.

Washington, D. C.—Arthur S. Flemming, of Kingston, N. Y., graduated from the George Washington University at the law school held Wednesday, October 18, with the degree of Bachelor of Laws from the Law School. The ceremony took place in the main hall of the university at noon.

Dr. Clyde Heck Marvin, president, delivered the commencement address. Degrees and certificates were conferred upon 145 graduates at that time.

The George Washington University, largest in the South Atlantic States, enrolls students from every State in the United States and from 14 foreign countries. It was chartered by act of Congress in 1821, in accordance with George Washington's desire for a university located in the nation's capital. The university comprises a junior college, senior (Columbia) college, graduate council, professional schools of medicine, law, pharmacy, education, government, agriculture, and summer sessions.

OCTOBER MEETING OF HIGH SCHOOL P. T. A.

The October meeting of the High School P. T. A. was held Tuesday evening with a large attendance. This first meeting was of especial interest to the parents of the 1933 Freshmen as many things concerning high school routine were explained. The regular business meeting stressed the payment of dues, the

P. T. A. conference and attendance at the card party to be held October 25.

Mr. E. J. Smith, speaker of the charges which have been necessary to properly care for the 1,847 students and 100 instructors at the high school, also introduced the members of the faculty who were present.

Mr. Van Lingen remained the member that makes many contributions where there has been enrichment of faculty of subjects and enrichment of the school year. Kingston has kept to the high standard in education.

The program was then given over to Mr. Henry of the English department and two freshmen, subjects were considered, the subject of general education, Miss Rinkade and English by Mr. Henry.

This was followed by original talks by Mr. E. J. Smith, an Entering High School as a 1933 Freshman by the Freshman girls, Dorothy Mesinger of the commercial course and Patricia Whalen of the homemaking course.

Following the meeting refreshments were served.

Addition of 2,000 acres to the hop acreage of Oregon produced a market for more than 12,000 trellis poles.

NEW VOTING MACHINES ON EXHIBITION IN WOODSTOCK

Woodstock, Oct. 20.—On exhibition in the township are the new voting machines ordered last summer by the town board to obviate the necessity of the creation of a new election district.

The early showing is being made to acquaint townsmen with the simplicity of the machines and to show how easily and quickly voting may be accomplished by their use.

Police court collections dropped about $1,000 in August at Birmingham, Ala., as compared with the previous month.

U. S. WILL CHART OCEAN BED AGAIN

Six Ships of Survey Fleet to Resume Work

Washington.—The marine "woodpeckers" of the Department of Commerce have gone to sea again to take another try at a job that is never done, charting the shifting floor of the ocean along the Atlantic coast.

Months of unusual activity this summer have made innumerable changes in the coastal line and have given a new wave, though not a permanent one, to part of the ocean bed.

It is the task of the coast and geodetic survey division of the Commerce department to keep up to date topographical maps of the terrain under coastal waters.

Six ships operated by this division make up the woodpeckers' fleet. On the side of each ship is a sander, in effect a hammer which beats against the hull. Scientists measure the time it takes for this sound to go down to the bottom and echo back to the surface. Knowing the rate of speed of sound under water, this gives the depth.

Back and forth the woodpecker ships are rapping out their starlike sound, and the listeners chart the depths as they proceed.

To determine the exact position of each sounding, bombs are thrown overboard which explode on striking the water. Position is computed by a method of triangulation based on the length of time it takes the noise of the bomb to reach two known points ashore or two ships anchored at known positions.

This charting of the convolutions of the coastal bottom is kept up to date and is so exact that a commercial ship equipped with a "woodpecker" device, as many now are, can place its position when other means are unavailable merely by taking progressive soundings and checking against the coast and geodetic survey maps.

But this means constant rechecking and remapping, and the hurricanes of the past summer have made unusual changes. So the "woodpeckers" are out again, taking another try at a job that is never done.

Rock Garden Fans Are Carrying Off Old Fort

Prairie du Chien, Wis.—Rock garden enthusiasts are blamed here for the gradual disappearance of historic Fort Crawford, scene of many battles between Indians and white men in pioneer days. The last remaining part of the fort visible, is being carried away rapidly, stone by stone, by tourist souvenir hunters.

Residents here believe the popularity of the rock garden in recent years has done more to cause the disappearance of the old fort than anything else. Tourists view the historic stones, and decide that one or two would make a wonderful addition to the rock garden at home.

It is estimated that at the present rate there will be nothing left of the old fort in another ten years. As a result, a move has been started here to hire a guard for the historic spot.

Apart from their military history, the walls still standing are of interest to students of medicine, for it was inside the medical building that Dr. William Beaumont performed many of his experiments on Martin St. Alexis, "the man with the lid on his stomach." The experiments gave the medical world almost its first authentic knowledge of digestion.

Palace Neighbor Given Auto as Gift From King

London.—Motoring past Buckingham palace gardens recently, King George saw a car standing at the gate. Its paint work was spotless, but the lines betrayed its age.

A few days later Sister Agnes Keyser, to whom it belonged, was astonished to find in its place a brand new car of the same make as the king's and in the royal colors of maroon and scarlet. It was a gift from his majesty.

Sister Agnes, who conducts a hospital near the palace, is a close friend of the king and queen. She has her own key to the royal gardens and often strolls with the king.

Parrot Dies at 60

Believe Egyptians Discovered America

Paris.—Neither Leif Ericson nor Christopher Columbus discovered America, if Abbot Th. Moreux, director of the Bourges observatory, is right.

"An Egyptian expedition by the sea is very likely to have taken place in the days of the Pharaohs," says Abbot Moreux. "It is most probable that these Egyptians reached Central America long before the Christian era. They carried there the fruits of their own civilization and a very advanced astronomical science."

The Bourges astronomer recalls that the explorers of Columbus day noticed the natives of America had the same names for constellations in the sky as the Europeans with whom they had had no relations whatever up to then.

Local 'Phone Men Hurt As Car Hit Tree

The Catskill Mail of Thursday says:

Two men were injured, one of them severely, when the automobile in which they were riding, skidded on the wet pavement on the Sauger-ties state highway about a mile below Catskill at 5 o'clock Wednesday, left the road and struck a tree.

The injured: Alfred L. Harder of Clinton avenue, Kingston, district manager of the New York Telephone Company, lacerations of right temple over right eye; lower lip cut through in two places, small bone in face fractured, and four upper teeth knocked out. He also suffered severely from loss of blood and shock.

Arthur R. Nelson of Smith avenue, Kingston, manager of the Kingston branch of the New York Telephone Company, bruised right knee and elbow.

Both men were brought to the Memorial Hospital here, where they were treated by Dr. Mahlon H. Atkinson. After having his injuries dressed, Mr. Nelson was able to leave the hospital, but Mr. Harder will have to remain for two or three days, as he is very weak from loss of blood.

Mr. Nelson was driving the car. He said the automobile was not going at a high rate of speed, but that mud had accumulated on one of the rear tires and the machine skidded on the wet pavement. He was unable to stop in time to keep the car on the pavement and it struck the tree, head-on, badly damaging the automobile.

The accident was investigated by Troopers Sikora and Fitz.

Predictions Of Scores In Outstanding Grid Games

By HERBERT W. BARKER
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 20 (AP).—On the theory that one man's guess is as good as another's here's the way the outstanding games on the week-end football schedule look in advance.

Michigan-Ohio State—Michigan piled up 60 points against Michigan State and Cornell; Ohio State 95 on Virginia and Vanderbilt. The Big Ten title may rest on the result, making it tough for both teams as well as the prognosticators. Stringing along with the champions. A timid vote for Michigan.

Army-Illinois—A young fellow named Les Lindberg may turn this intersectional duel into an Illinois victory. The lightest Army team in years has not faced a major foe yet while Illinois spilled Wisconsin last week.

Pitt-Minnesota—A vote for Pitt's rambling Panthers but only after a terrific struggle with one of the Big Ten's most powerful eleven.

Notre Dame-Carnegie Tech—Howard Harpster has primed Carnegie for this game, building his hopes on a sturdy line and clever passing attack. Notre Dame, unimpressive in its first two games, will need to show improvement or take a beating.

Princeton-Columbia—Two of the east's major powers collide here with Columbia's experience perhaps more than offset by the Tigers' manpower.

Alabama-Tennessee—Some southern critics have labelled Alabama a "perfect team" and this, coupled with Tennessee's defeat by Duke last week, inspires a hesitant ballot for the crimson tide.

Fordham-Boston College—Boston College usually is one of the east's finest defensive outfits but this looks like the spot for Fordham to avenge last week's 3-0 defeat.

Southern California-Oregon State—There's nothing to do here but to trail along with Southern California's men of Troy.

Yale-Brown—A pair of strong defensive teams, neither of which has shown much scoring power so far. If there's an edge at all, it seems to belong to Brown although the Bruins apparently are not as formidable as a year ago.

PUNTS and PASSES

(By The Associated Press)
Columbus, O.—Sam Williamson, Ohio State coach, is sure of being on the safe side no matter what kind of football he selects to use in Saturday's Michigan-Ohio State game. The Wolverines have been using a new type of "rough" ball, having irregular shallow depressions on the surface. In practice but in games they let their opponents choose between that and the old smooth covered ball. Ohio has been using the old type but switched to the rough ball for this week's workouts so the players would be accustomed to both.

University, Va.—Virginia's Cavaliers, who have lost their last two games, hope to change the order of things this week by taking up their rivalry with Navy where it was dropped in 1909. Virginia won that game 5 to 0.

South Bend, Ind.—Hunk Anderson, Notre Dame coach, has decided to fall back on one of Knute Rockne's favorite stunts in the struggle with Carnegie Tech. Before leaving for Pittsburgh he indicated he would start a reserve eleven of "shock troops" against the Tartans but that two more full teams would get into action.

New Haven, Conn.—Brown's 7-2 victory over Yale last year appears to have stimulated ticket sales for tomorrow's clash. Yale authorities are expecting a crowd of more than 25,000.

Macon, Ga.—Some of the fans thought Mercer was tackling a pretty tough assignment in playing Army and Navy on successive Saturdays but now it appears those were just warm-up games for the Bears. With the best team in years, Mercer's real objective has been this week's game with Georgia and the team has been pointing for that clash ever since Labor Day.

Syracuse, N. Y.—Some of the Syracuse minor sport teams, which had to find their own means of getting to out-of-town engagements last spring, have given the football squad a lesson in travelling well and cheaply. The Orange squad is going to the game with Cornell at Ithaca by automobile and does not expect to arrive until late Saturday morning.

Ann Arbor—In the matter of attendance at least, the Michigan-Ohio State scrap promises to be the biggest on this week's grid program. For the first time since 1922 it has been necessary to put extra seats in the stadium, increasing its capacity to 37,000 and already some 75,000 tickets have been sold.

Yellow Jackets At Sing Sing Sunday

The Kingston Yellow Jackets face the strongest competition of the season Sunday against the Sing Sing prison team at Ossining where a record crowd is expected to watch the two eleven fight it out in a battle that promises plenty of thrills.

Last week the Sing Sing gridgers overhauled the Port Jervis Police, 40-13, and are set to handle the Wasps in the same manner. "But the boys of Warden Lawes won't be able to stand the Boes like they did the Tri-Staters," says Manager Ken Dyson who believes his Yellow Jackets will beat Sing Sing.

Kingston's lineup will be the same as that used for the two games already played, with the exception of Alabama Christmas, West Point artillery star, who has been signed to work in conjunction with Don Beany, another soldier player. Both played with the Jackets in past seasons. They are great assets to the club and should figure prominently in bringing the Jackets through to victory Sunday, Dyson thinks.

The bus leaving the American Legion building on West O'Reilly street Sunday morning will start at 10 o'clock. Those traveling in private cars will find the gates of the prison open at 1 p. m. They close at 1:30. Starting time of the game is 2 o'clock. Previous to the contest there will be a parade of the two football teams, led by the prison band.

Army Ready to Give Illinois a Hard Game

The Army football team is speeding west today for its game with Illinois Saturday at Cleveland on the gridiron of Municipal Stadium. Leaving the West Point military reservation, the Cadets received one of the most rousing send-offs ever given an Army eleven bound for competition away from home.

In scrimmages throughout the week, Army coaches threw caution to the winds and engaged in delirious scrimmages in an effort to build up a satisfactory defense and fast, coordinated offense for the powerful Illinois team, which last week defeated Wisconsin 21-0. Despite the hard drills, Army's first stringers are without injuries and ready to give good account of themselves.

The probable Army starting lineup:

New York, Oct. 20 (A.P.).—Some recovery came into the securities markets today, but restlessness remained apparent. Prices were still in the grip of indecision and prices dipped, rallied and fluctuated.

Prices were turned over at a fast pace in the first hour, with minor advances and about even. There was a later sagging movement, but a fairly substantial recovery. Many of the leaders getting up again or more. The activity diminished noticeably after the initial rush.

Prices provided little stimulus, but they were drifting irregularly. There was fairly steady and other commodities were mixed. The dollar was somewhat firmer in foreign exchange dealings. Bonds were

Bodies of Twins Recovered from Fire

Phelps, N. Y., Oct. 20 (A.P.).—The bodies of Edna and Anna De Looze, three year old twins, were recovered today from the fire swept ruins of their home two miles south of here.

The twins were asleep upstairs late yesterday afternoon when their father, Peter De Looze, a night watchman, slept downstairs. De Looze awoke and discovered the fire in the children's room. His wife, working in the kitchen, was unaware of the fire until her husband saved the alarm.

Rescue attempts from the inside and outside were unsuccessful and the house was destroyed. Village fire officials said today they could not determine the cause.

Many Present At Zucca's Minstrels

The Holy Cross Parish House was packed to its capacity on Wednesday evening, October 18, when Paul Zucca's Minstrel Show was given under the auspices of Clinton Chapter No. 445, Order of the Eastern Star. The show was a success from start to finish. There was plenty of humor and wit displayed and the jokes on local people caused much laughter. The idea for the setting originated with Harold V. Clayton, the efficient director. The show took place in one of the class rooms of Zucca Institute located in beautiful "Forget Your Blues Valley."

With Professor Paul Zucca in attendance. This was no usual school of learning with books, prods, and demerits but rather a school of songs, dances, jokes and good times. There were three groups taking part as follows: Paul Zucca and his Varsity Six composed of Danny Bittner, Leo Mosher, Herman Zucca, Harry Stitzel, Paul Terpening, and Cyprie Bashall. The second group was the Senior Class with Bill Murray as the Class President. The following were members of the Senior Class: Carl Will, Douglas Kennedy, Otis Van Aken, Cliff Moore, Fred Scott, and C. Elmendorf, and of course every college must have Freshmen and this college was not lacking in that respect. The Freshmen were the End Men: Big Add Schultz, Guard on the Institute's Ping Pong Team, Little Jack Garon "The Specialist," Long Fred Spalt, so dumb he tried to tie a horse to the Saturday Evening Post. "Sleepy" Hank Deane, Nature's gift to the ladies. "Teen" Clayton, Treasurer of the Fraternity. "Barny" Barnhardt, Who watches the Treasurer.

Number of Cases Concluded in Court

One Case Sent to City Court. A Cause of Action in Another Motion Granted to Dismiss in Third—Others Disposed of.

A jury was taken this morning in Supreme court for the trial of a motion brought by Louis A. Bascen of Kingston against Byron Gerlach of the town of Ulster. The action involves payment of a note and defendant enters a counter claim contending that he sold merchandise to plaintiff and has not been credited. The plaintiff alleged that credit had been given for the articles. Arthur B. East appeared for plaintiff and A. J. Cook for defendant.

After the jury had been taken counsel in the case was called to the bench by Judge Foster and after a conference the case was struck from the calendar and it was announced that the matter was one to be tried in city court instead of in supreme court.

As there was nothing else ready for trial recess was taken until Monday morning at 10 o'clock. In the matter of Foreyth & Davis Motor Car Company, Inc. against William C. Kingman and another which was on trial Wednesday afternoon and Thursday, the case was sent to the jury Thursday afternoon and the jury returned a verdict of no cause of action. The action was brought against guarantors of a lease which was held on the Foreyth & Davis premises on Main street by the former Haver-Hardenbergh Company, furniture dealers. The furniture company vacated the premises after a fire and the action was brought against guarantors of the lease to collect rent for the premises after the fire. The defense was that the lease contained a "fire clause" which gave the firm a right to terminate the lease if the premises were damaged by fire. They took advantage of the clause and vacated. N. Le Van Haver and George F. Kaufman appeared for the defendants. Frank W. Brooks, who appeared for plaintiff, moved to set aside the verdict and decision was reserved on the motion.

Thursday afternoon an action to recover for professional services was begun. Dr. Frank L. Eastman sought to recover from the New York Central Railroad Company for services rendered an employee of the railroad. The complaint alleged that Joseph Moore, gateman at the West Shore crossing, was injured on duty and that the regular railroad physicians were absent at the time. For about a year and a half he attended Moore, making over 400 calls. It was alleged that the case was a railroad case for which the railroad was responsible for the bill contracted. Frank W. Brooks appeared for plaintiff and at the conclusion of plaintiff's case Harry H. Flemming, who appeared for the railroad, moved for a dismissal of the complaint after testimony had been given by a railroad official called by plaintiff to the effect that the railroad had not authorized the treatments. Judge Foster reserved decision on the matter until this morning, when he granted the motion.

The following cases were disposed of at the call this morning: No. 127, J. Emerick against Leon C. Sheller, an action for goods sold and delivered. Eldor Sampson for plaintiff and Walter A. Swett for defendant. Settled.

No. 611, Elsie Cooper against Samuel Oberfeldt, negligence. J. B. Lyons for plaintiff and A. J. Cook for defendant. Settled.

No. 163, Harry Miller against Dorothy Rennie, negligence. Morris Kanfer for plaintiff and W. A. Earl for defendant. Settled.

No. 72, Hans Martens against Walter Davenport, action for damages. Morris Kanfer for plaintiff and V. B. Van Wageningen for defendant. Dismissed without costs on consent of counsel.

No. 201, Mary Struhar against County of Ulster, negligence. Dismissed on motion of A. J. Cook for defendant because of failure to secure costs.

No. 203, James E. Delaney against County of Ulster. Dismissed on motion of A. J. Cook counsel for defendant for failure to secure costs.

No. 220, Fredro Mdee, Inc. against Benjamin Leone and another an action for damage to car. A. D. & A. W. Lent for plaintiff and W. E. Lowther for defendant. Settled.

No. 226, Benjamin Leone against Fredro Mdee, Inc. and another. Negligence. Joseph B. Dugan for plaintiff and Barton & Darling for defendant. Settled.

Kiwanis Fashion Show And Ball At Armory

What was the cunning little ring bearer and the cute little flower girl? Agnesie Barnhart. The dresses were furnished by the New York Book and Suit Co.; flowers by Mrs. Mary Schoonmaker, and dress accessories by Walter Ostrander, Goldman's Style Shop.

Goldman's Style Shop showed the numbers in ladies' wear, the apparel, special attention being given to the selection of garments suitable to the personality of the wearer. The following took part in the show: Frances Finn, Anne Knecht, Mary Saca, Esther Bascen, Alice Ewing, Evelyn Goldy, Bess New, Mary Cashin, Ida Epstein, Janet Ewing.

Shoes shown for the models of London's Goldman's and the New York Book and Suit Co. were furnished through the courtesy of the Greenwood Shoe Shop and showed not only the latest styles in footwear, but appropriate styles for the costume being shown. Shoes shown by Rose & Gorman were from their own shoe department.

Pleasing Entertainment. Following the fashion show several pleasing entertainment features were presented, led by Miss Rita Gould, well known to listeners on Station WOL and who has headed a number of big fashion events in New York.

Miss Gould entered wearing a striking costume of red, with a large "hoppy" red hat, reminiscent of the "gay nineties", and after singing a number of songs harking back to those days, led the audience in one of the popular songs of those days, displaying a very pleasing voice. In conclusion she spoke of her pleasure at greeting such a large crowd and what their presence meant in supporting such a worthy enterprise as that sponsored by Kiwanis.

Miss Gould was followed by Carlos and Antonia Fossella, whose dancing of the Argentine Tango and Spanish Whirlwind dances was spectacular and done with a grace and finish that proved that the reputation they have won in New York was well merited. The program concluded with an address by Mr. Charles Foster, one of the chiefs of the Kiwanis club. He said that the Kiwanis club had been very successful in its efforts to help the needy and that the club was proud to have been able to help the needy in this way.

Following the entertainment the ballroom floor was cleared and the large crowd enjoyed dancing till a late hour, music being furnished by orchestras under the direction of Paul Zucca and John Erbe. Members of the Kiwanis club were supported in their efforts by their wives, who were in a large measure responsible for the success of the occasion. Mrs. Raymond Gross had charge of the fashion show, which under her direction, moved along with the finish of a professional endeavor.

Women's committees aiding the Kiwanis included:

Miss Holbrook Buys County Club Tavern

Woodstock, Oct. 20.—Perhaps the most interesting news break the village has had this autumn came this week in the announcement by the authorities of the Woodstock County Club that the large building once used by the Risley family as the homestead, now called the Country Club Tavern, was purchased this past week by Miss Jane Holbrook, of Woodstock, for $5,000.

Announcement is to the effect that Miss Holbrook intends to remodel and renovate certain aspects of the house in order that it may be opened as a first-class hotel, although specific plans in this connection have not been made public, nor, it is believed, have contracts been let.

The Country Club Tavern is situated at the junction of the Woodstock-West Hurley and Woodstock-Saunders roads, about a quarter of a mile above the village proper, and is directly across the highway from the old mill now used as the club house.

Management of the transformed homestead was for two seasons in the hands of Ronald and Mable Locke, and the past season was under the direct supervision of Henri Schaur, who in 1932 operated Ken's Restaurant on the Rock City road. Last summer Mr. and Mrs. Locke conducted the Old Woodstock Inn.

At one time the house was used as a boarding house by the Risley family, and this business in conjunction with the extensive farming and milling conducted by them, made the corner a very busy one. It is one of the advance landmarks of Woodstock.

The Bad Bears

By MARY GRAHAM SONNER

It was all very well not to have scolded the Bears for letting the nature class go on by itself while they ate and ate so as to gather fat and strength for their winter sleep.

That was the nature of Bears, but when Willy Nilly reached home he was cross. While he had been off looking for the Chickens and bringing them back, the Bears had been feasting in his house!

"Oh, look," Jelly Bear had growled. "Willy Nilly has been putting away all sorts of good things to eat."

"Smack, smack," Honey Bear had said. "don't they look delicious? It's too bad we have to go to sleep and miss them all. Maybe we could stay awake this winter, but oh, I don't believe I could keep my eyes open in the winter time."

"Let's eat our share now," Jelly Bear had said. "Willy Nilly shouldn't mind. After all we're not eating all winter."

"That's so," readily agreed Honey Bear. "Oh, he has put some honey on that shelf. I must have my share of that!"

"I see some jelly," Jelly Bear had exclaimed. "They gave me my name because I'm so fond of it. Really I must live up to my name."

So they had eaten and eaten and eaten. They had opened cans, upset jelly and honey over the floor, tried to lick up some of it, but had left it all very sticky. They had eaten a great deal more than their share and they knew they were bad.

Willy Nilly was thankful he hadn't laid in the entire winter supply, and he was about to go right after the Bears when he rushed Rip and Top Notch, both very much excited.

AVOID THE DANGER OF CONSTIPATION

Delicious Cereal Overcomes
This Condition Safely and Pleasantly

The first signs of constipation may be headaches, tired feelings, sallow complexions, sleeplessness, loss of appetite. If neglected, constipation may seriously impair health.

Today, you can banish constipation by simply eating a delicious cereal. Laboratory tests show that Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" to exercise the intestines, and vitamin B to further aid regular habits. ALL-BRAN is also a good source of iron for the blood.

This "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is gentle in action similar to leafy vegetables. Within the body, it forms a soft mass, and gently clears out the intestinal wastes.

Two tablespoonfuls daily will overcome most types of common constipation. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Appetizing recipes on the red-and-green package. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Statesmen's Work Like Housewives' Noted Paris Feminist To Tell America

By ADELAIDE KERR
Paris (AP)—A woman who predicts that women are destined to play a greater role in international politics says for the United States October 22.

She is Valentine Thompson, internationally known French writer and lecturer, who will give a November series of addresses in New York, Washington and Philadelphia on "The reasons behind the news in modern Europe," sponsored by a group of prominent Americans.

She has three reasons for her belief in woman's future advance in the political field.

"Women are good listeners and men will tell them things which they won't tell other men," she says. "So women should make good mediators."

"They are less tradition-ridden than men and so are more willing to try experiments."

"They are better budgeters than men—they're used to it."

"After all, the problems of the nation are only the sum of all the little problems in the homes. If women are accustomed to making budgets for those, why not for nations? To begin with they'd buy fewer guns."

She points to President Roosevelt's inclusion of a woman in his cabinet and to the advance of women in Spain since the revolution as indications of a wide trend.

In private life Miss Thompson is the wife of Andre Jager-Schmidt, French film producer. Her talks in America will be based on recent interviews with Mussolini, Hitler, Dolfus and other European personages. Sponsors of her trip include Mrs. Kermit Roosevelt, Mrs. Elihu Root, Jr., Mrs. Marshall Field, Henry Fairfield Osborn and William Nelson Cromwell.

Women's Federation Executives Meet

There was a busy session of the executive committee of the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs held at the City Library on Thursday afternoon. Mrs. Harry B. Walker, the president, presided.

The first committee chairman to report was Dr. Mary Gage-Day, of the Public Health Committee. Dr. Day read a letter from Homer Folks of the New York State Charities Aid asking that the women vote favorably on the bond issue of $60,000,000 for state relief and welfare work, at the coming election. The letter stated that this was both non-political and non-partisan in character, and was a necessity to care for the unemployed in this state, going into considerable detail as to those needs. Dr. Day was asked by Mr. Folks to secure from the candidates for mayor their attitude and reaction to this bond issue, and from both E. Frank Flanagan and Harry B. Walker she had received their favorable reaction.

The executive committee of the Federation itself went on record as favoring the bond issue, after which there was considerable discussion over the duplication of groups necessary to put across the welfare work in this and other communities; local volunteer and municipal, state and federal.

At that point Mr. Evans of the Coordinating Welfare Committee and Walter C. Donnaruma were introduced to the executive committee by Mrs. Walker, as coming to speak to them on the matter of a central file for the city. It was recalled that last year it had been attempted to organize such a central file in order that there might not be a duplication of relief aid of any sort and also that there might be an authoritative and confidential record of help given, making mutual information between organizations of a philanthropic character possible. He stated that his particular objective was to ask that the Federation of Women's Clubs go on record as supporting such a file and give to the same, confidentially the names of any families that they might be giving help at the present time or in the future. The women favored such a central file and then piled Mr. Evans with many questions as to the need of the big bond issue and its very small duplication in volunteer aid, etc., since all of these forms of help must come in the end out of the pockets of the taxpayers.

The good government committee's report had to do almost entirely with the desirability of impressing the governing forces of the country with the women's intense desire that the country be not involved in another European war.

Mrs. Fred Luther, chairman of the moving picture committee, was unable to be present, but sent in a report. In it "Berkeley Square," "I Loved a Woman," "The Power and the Glory" were considered the three best pictures of the month. "Dr. Bull" with Will Rogers was well spoken of. "One Sunday Afternoon" was counted a good family picture, and "Life at Annapolis" involving navy discipline and code of honor.

together with a pretty romance, was said to have interest for any audience and to be particularly appealing to young people. "Emperor Jones" was considered a superior photo play, taken from the pen of Eugene O'Neill. An educational picture, "The String Quartet" was spoken of as very good, also "The Brass Choir." Both deal with the operation of the symphony orchestra and the recording of tone is said to be exceptionally fine.

The Coterie representative at the committee meeting, Mrs. Monroe, announced the fact that the Coterie, being the hostess club at the open meeting of the Federation, would entertain the organization on November 4, when Mrs. Ingalsbe of Glens Falls will give a piano recital of compositions of her own and of the great masters.

Mrs. Walker announced the dates of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs as being November 13 to 16, inclusive, the place being Elmira. It was voted to send the president as a representative of the Federation, her expenses to be paid by the Federation. Announcement of the other three delegates and the four alternates will be made at the open meeting.

Mrs. Fraser, the treasurer, informed the meeting that the post office had asked for the names and addresses of the officers of the Kingston Federation of Women's Clubs and also the names and addresses of the various affiliated clubs, and the representative present were asked to have their clubs comply with the request as the Federation would do. This brought the meeting to a close.

METACAHONTS

Metacahonts, Oct. 20.—The next monthly meeting of the Willing Workers will be held at the home of Mrs. Chester Wood on Wednesday afternoon, November 1.

The chicken supper held on Wednesday evening, October 18, was a success.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester Wood and James Wood entertained relatives from New York over Columbus Day and week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Leroy Keider and Mr. and Mrs. Charles D. Osterhout and son, Jansen, were Sunday evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Davis and daughter, Marjorie. All enjoyed a fine duck dinner after which they were entertained by fine music given by Miss Davis.

Franklin Keider spent Columbus Day and week-end with Mr. and Mrs. Henry J. Flynn at Boston, Mass.

Dr. E. O. Osterhout and family of Newburgh attended the chicken supper on Wednesday evening, October 18, at the hall.

Where Columbus Landed

On his first voyage to the New World Columbus sighted land and disembarked on the island called by the Indians Guanahani. Columbus named the island San Salvador, but it is generally identified with Watling Island, one of the Bahama group.

NRA Creates Time For Leisure Reading

Now that hours have been shortened, people are turning to books for recreation more than ever. The depression enormously increased the demand for books, especially current fiction. It is one of the most significant trends in the New Deal, states a prominent library authority at the Rose & Gorman Department store. I believe more and more people are going to discover the pleasure offered in books as recreation.

the pleasure offered in books as recreation.

"To help supply the demand we have installed a new, up-to-date, and the most important, harmless and least expensive way to enjoy the new leisure. And if there is a code for housewives, one of these days we shall probably find every book in our library in circulation," he said.

"Little Stories for Bedtime" by Thornton W. Burgess

JERRY AND PETER TALK THINGS OVER

NOW that his house was finished, Jerry Muskrat felt that he was entitled to a little rest. He had worked faithfully. Now he could enjoy the results. It certainly was a fine house. Peter Rabbit said so quite as if he were a judge of houses. You know any old tumble-down house some one else has given up will do for Peter.

"Yes," said Jerry, "it is a pretty good house. It is a better house than my old one. I am glad I have finished it. A house like that means a whole lot of hard work."

"I should say so," exclaimed Peter. "I wouldn't work like that for the finest house that ever was."

Jerry Muskrat shook his head at Peter reprovingly. "Peter," said he,

"Why, of course I do," replied Peter.

"You never look beyond your own nose, do you?"

"Why, of course I do," replied Peter. "If I didn't, how would I ever see anything?"

Jerry laughed. "I didn't mean that just that way," he explained. "I mean you never look ahead and plan for the future. Now you haven't prepared a single thing for the coming winter, have you?"

"No," replied Peter promptly. "Each day brings its own troubles and they are plenty, thank you. I don't see any use at all in worrying about things that may never happen. It is time enough to worry when there is something to worry about."

"Who is worrying?" demanded Jerry. "I'm not worrying. It is just to keep from having to worry that I have been working so hard. Now, you know, Peter Rabbit, that just as surely as you are sitting here on this bank you are going to have a hard winter. You are going to have hard work to get enough to eat; you are going to have hard work to get around in bad weather, and you are going to shiver with the cold."

"Maybe we won't have a bad winter," interrupted Peter.

"Now, I," continued Jerry, without heeding the interruption at all, "am going to be perfectly comfortable, no matter what kind of a winter we have. It won't make any difference to me how cold or how stormy the weather may get. I won't make that much difference." Jerry slipped the ground with his tail. "In that house is a nice, soft, comfortable bed of grass. Those walls are so thick the cold will not get through. Jack Frost will freeze the mud in the walls and roof so hard that none of my enemies can tear them open. I can swim about under the ice when I please. After I have rested a little I shall store up a few supplies of food in a storehouse I have provided in the bank. Then Jack Frost may come as soon as he pleases. All winter long I shall live in perfect ease and comfort and all because I have looked ahead and prepared for it by a little hard work now."

"Hub!" said Peter. Then at a sudden thought he added, "Do you have to lay up a store of food?"

"Oh, no," replied Jerry. "I don't have to. Usually, I can find enough roots and things in the mud at the bottom of the Smiling Pool."

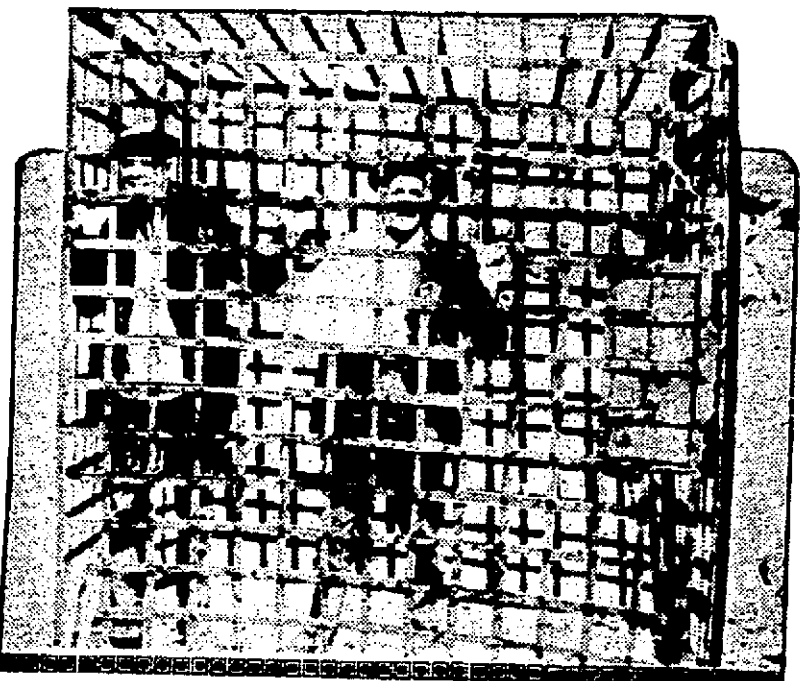

"Then what do you do it for?" demanded Peter. "That's what I call a waste of time, not to mention the work."

"Nothing of the kind," retorted Jerry. "It is thrift. It is making sure in case I shouldn't be able to get all I need from the bottom of the Smiling Pool."

"Hub!" said Peter. "Hub! I never do any work I don't have to." "Which means that you haven't yet learned how to live," laughed Jerry Muskrat.

It's No Fun to Be in This Jail

CHURCHILL, which is Canada's newest and most northern seaport, on Hudson bay, has what is probably the strictest jail in the world. It is erected on open ground in a locality where the temperature hovers around zero even in September and October. Of course only the toughest malefactors are locked in this jail.

They Keep Tab on the Chiselers

GEN. THOMAS S. HAMMOND, in charge of compliance boards established throughout the nation by the NRA to check up on those who chisel on the blue eagle, talks matters over with Miss Mary E. Hughes, head of the million and a half women of the country who have enrolled to help Gen. Hugh S. Johnson and President Roosevelt fight the battle of the depression. Among the duties of the army of women who report to Miss Hughes for commands is to secure the names of those who do not comply with promises made Uncle Sam when they signed up for the blue eagle. The black book in front of Miss Hughes and General Hammond may be turned over to General Johnson when the administrator of the NRA is ready to "crack down on the chiselers" as he promised he would do when the proper time comes.
